Advice for parents on supporting their children who are affected by the death of someone close to them

The charities Winston's Wish and Cruse both offer support and advice to people who have experienced a bereavement, with Winston's Wish being specifically aimed at supporting young people. They have both recently added specific resources to help support parents and carers through the current COVID-19 situation and also have many general resources to support parents and young people. Cruse has also created a general website "Hope again": www.hopeagain.org.uk which has been designed by young people themselves and contains information, videos and message boards for other young people.

Parents may find the following guidelines from Winston's Wish reassuring:

- Remember that 'Super parents' don't exist. Just do what you can, when you can.
- Be gentle on yourself. There is more than one way to support your children. Choose the things that you feel most comfortable with.
- Accept that some things just can't be 'made better' in a short space of time.
- Talk to children using words they understand and ask questions to check they have understood you.
- Give information a bit at a time if your children are younger. Pieces of the 'jigsaw puzzle' can be put together over time to make the complete picture.
- Show children how you are feeling: it helps them to know that it's OK to show their feelings too.
- Encourage children to ask questions and keep answering them even if it's for the 100th time.
- Answer questions honestly and simply; and be willing to say 'I don't know'.
- Try to find ways in which children can be involved.
- Keep talking about the person who has died.
- Trust yourself and your instincts you haven't forgotten how to parent your child.
- · Look after yourself too.
